

Mayors' call for 'across the board' alcohol reviews ignored by 'Partnerships' Minister

Palm Island Mayor Alf Lacey says plans to only review Aboriginal communities where Alcohol Management Plans were working – according to the Government's criteria – missed the point of calls for a broader, comparative reviews across every community.

Earlier this month Mayors from Aboriginal Shires across the state (some pictured above) called on the Government to "stop putting a bandaid on the sore and get to the real cause". Early last week Minister for Aboriginal & Torres Strait Islander Partnerships Desley Boyle told Parliament reviews would only be carried out on communities where a "sustained a reduction in two key indicators of violence" had been achieved.

Ms Boyle said consultation with each of the communities about the benchmarks had already started and would continue into the early months of next year.

"It is a sad fact that levels of violence towards women and children have been far too high for too long. There will be no changes to AMPs until there are sustained reductions in the levels of violence in these communities," Ms Boyle said.

"Under the proposed benchmarks communities will need to demonstrate a sustained reduction in harm over the period of two years and bring violence levels down to those of any other regional community in Queensland.

"Then a community may exercise its option and trigger a review of its Alcohol Management Plan."

Mr Lacey said the term "partnerships" should be taken out of the Minister's title.

"There's no partnership here, the Minister is not hearing what we're saying and in the meantime our people are being fined, jailed, and worse, for things which are legal everywhere else in the country," he said.

"Only reviewing communities where they think the plans are working is clearly ignoring what our Aboriginal Shire Mayors have been saying for years – these restrictions are doing more harm than good.

"The Minister has picked one or two criteria to work from out of a raft of problems with AMPs across the board," Mr Lacey said.

The Mayors' meeting collectively agreed that after ten years of alcohol restrictions - ranging from completely dry to carriage limits to restricted purchase - AMPs were not working.

Federal MP due for Palm Island visit

Member for Herbert Ewen Jones will be on Palm Island today.

Mr Jones is expected to meet with the Mayor and Councillors, visit the schools, and get an update on the latest housing developments on the Island, his office said.

Mr Jones visited Palm several times in the lead up to the August 21 election in which he defeated three other candidates including long term Townsville Mayor Tony Mooney.

During his campaigning Mr Jones made a commitment to visit Palm once every three months. Palm Island Voice contacted Mr Jones' office on November 24 asking when his first visit would be, given that the three months had expired.

"I can confirm that Mr Jones will be going to Palm Island on Tuesday," a spokeswoman for his office said. Mr Jones has been passionate in public about trying to help improve the living standards of Palm Islanders with a major aim to have more housing provided.

Alcohol problems ignored by 'Partnerships' Minister

Problems cited by most of the Mayors present included:

- Sly-grogging, which they said was mostly carried out by non-drinkers
- People risking their lives to access alcohol
- A massive increase in the amount of other drugs, especially amphetamines, available on communities
- Families losing precious income because of fines
- Innocent people and young teenagers publicly embarrassed by police searches

They said they were frustrated and angry that the Government appeared reluctant to look at any changes, despite AMP laws varying considerably across communities, which was viewed as being frustrating and unfair.

Mr Lacey said the Mayors agreed that a comparative review should be carried out in every single community for the purposes of comparison.

"There shouldn't be this 'picking off' of communities, one at a time," he said.

"We need to see the whole picture."

At the time of the meeting Mr Lacey said: "We don't want to go back to the old days but we do want a good hard look at what's in place now, what's working and what's not.

"It's sickening to see people facing court here over things which are not illegal on the mainland.

"Sitting around the table here today we have Mayors representing completely dry communities, who are under siege because of sly grogging, through our own community which has a tightly-controlled AMP.

"And I can tell you now, from our side of the table AMPs are not working and we need that review."

The meeting was also addressed by Associate Professor Gracelyn Smallwood who has more than 40 years of experience as a registered nurse on communities.

Ms Smallwood said she had seen the effects of the AMPs in Townsville, and on young people in particular, over the past ten years.

Ms Boyles said there were 15 Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities with restrictions in place and AMPs varied from community to community – some were completely dry, some had a zero carriage limit, some had a carriage limit of up to 60-cans of light or mid-strength beer and some had licensed premises.

Franciscan nuns to leave after 60 years of service

AFTER 60 years of service to the people of Palm Island, the Franciscan Missionaries of Mary nuns will be leaving next year.

Palm Island Voice heard about the move when we were approached by staff of a State Government Minister for any pics which could be presented to Palm Island's long term Sister Christina McGlynn (pictured right) – and we were happy to do so! Sister Christina is much loved on Palm Island for her wonderful work as part of the Catholic Church, and has described the locals as "beautiful people".

Sister Christina, who has just returned from holidays, was asked when she would be leaving what has been her home for many years.

"I have returned from two weeks holiday down on the NSW coast at Austinmere," she said.

"It was the most restful holiday I have ever had and I really enjoyed it.

"Yes, sadly our little Franciscan community will leave Palm Island sometime after the 30th May when my contract with the Diocese of Townsville comes to an end.

"The decision was made by our Leadership Team and although it was a hard decision to make, withdrawing after 60 years of service as Franciscan Missionaries of Mary.

"However the reality is that we have no younger Sisters in Australia to replace us and although we will go with heavy hearts we will do so very gratefully for the privilege of having worked and ministered to our beloved Palm Island community."

Sister Christina said when she left her prayers would continue daily for Palm Islanders.

Cardwell footy success despite wet weather

RAIN did not prevent hundreds of Palm Islanders from travelling to Cardwell to watch their football teams take on the Girringun Pirates on November 20.

The games were played in honour of the late Jack Henry and Desmond (Joe) Romelo who tragically drowned in February 2009.

At the Cardwell football grounds there was a large contingent of Palm Islanders, including Mayor Alf Lacey who supported the teams.

Mislam Sam organised the Palm Island teams and said he had many calls from supporters and players on his mobile phone wanting to know had the games been cancelled. "They went ahead and were very successful," Mislam said.

The Palm Island Barracudas 17 years and under side defeated the local Pirates 28-14 to retain the shield they won in the inaugural match last year.

Then in the A grade match the Palm Island Jets and Girringun Pirates played an exciting 34-all draw.

Congratulations to our Senior Campus students!!!

Earlier this month a proud moment was recorded in the history of Palm Island, writes Palm Island Senior Campus teacher Jarad Richardson.

The class of 2010 were presented with their graduation certificates in a stirring ceremony at the PCYC arena.

The ceremony was a culmination of many weeks of organisation by the Head of Campus, Leanne Young, and staff.

Graduating students have attended regularly and worked hard to complete assessments in a range of essential subject areas; all against the backdrop of numerous external pressures on the Island. Many are now looking further ahead and want to enter higher education on the mainland. It is hoped next year Palm Island Senior Campus will be able to offer authority registered subjects through the School of Distance Education which would enable students to enter University directly from Palm Island.

The graduation ceremony was attended by parents, relatives, and invited community members and elders, many of whom have provided crucial support to the school and its students throughout their senior education.

Mrs Josephine Geia (Aunty Peena) opened proceedings with a moving blessing and messages of hope. She was followed by Mrs Meredith Wenta, Principal of Kirwan High which served as the mentoring and administrative centre for the campus.

The ceremony also provided a fantastic opportunity to recognise and award academic prize winners in all our grades 10-12 – for those who achieved most highly in their subject areas.

Winners of the Most Outstanding Student award for each year level went to Jennifer Burns (10), Naioki Castors (11) and John Sibley (12).

Later that evening saw the first year 12 formal ever held on Palm Island. The Coolgaree Bay Sports Bar and Bistro was beautifully decorated with local palm leaves and flowers and balloons while the guests of honour wouldn't have looked out of place on a red carpet. After a grand entrance, and hundreds of photos, the students and guests enjoyed a delicious meal and celebrated the achievements of the graduates in style.

Good show for Cardwell annual comp

IN one of the most exciting games of rugby league seen for some time, the Palm Island Jets and Girringun Pirates played a nail biting 34-all draw in Cardwell earlier this month. At the same carnival up and coming u17 players defeated the local side with an impressive 28-14 win.

The Pirates side won last year's encounter and went into the game as hot favorites considering many of their players had competed in the strong Cairns and District A Grade rugby league competition.

Indeed some lined up in the Tully Tigers side which won the premierships over Kangaroos.

But Jets produced a star studded line up which included former NRL back Milton Thaiday with Fred Bulsey, Tabua Oui, Raoul Miller, Georgie Dabea, Darryl Pearson and many more.

Jets looked like running away with the game early.

In the opening minutes they crossed in the corner and the try was converted by the radar-like boot of Tabua Oui.

Esrom Geia scored, Oui converted and Jets had bolted to a 12-nil lead before Pirates hit back to reduce that to 6-12.

Then Gresham Ross - backing up from the 17 years game - scored and when Oui's kick was true the Jets led 18-6.

Pirates fought back to score a try in the last minute but missed the conversion, levelling the scores.

It was a fitting result for two good sides after 80 minutes of intriguing football.

MEANWHILE future champions were on show when the Palm Island Barracudas 17 years and under team (pictured above) defeated Girringun Pirates side 28-14 in Cardwell.

It was the curtain raiser to the A-grade game between Palm Island Jets and Pirates.

The young Palm side won the game last year and players were keen to continue on their winning way.

There was some top class action and Palm had many winners in the side which played in the colours of local club side Hornets.

Palm coach Rio Walsh was asked after the game to nominate his best players which proved a difficult task. "They all played well and I can't really single any out," he said.

Barracudas captain Clinton Conway and vice captain Tibian Wyles proudly held the trophy after the game which was played in drizzling rain at times.

For Barracudas Kenneth Wilson, Gresham Ross, Fred Haines, Josh Milne, Mitch O'Brien scored tries and 'superboot' Fred Haines booted 4 goals in a great individual performance.

Several of the youngsters then lined up for the Jets side in the A-Grade game.
