Don't risk your tenancy.

Acceptable behaviour in public housing.

We expect tenants to comply with their tenancy agreement, be good neighbours and not cause damage to their public housing property.

Tenants are responsible for their behaviour as well as the behaviour of everyone who lives with them and visitors to their home.

Under our Antisocial Behaviour Policy, we will take action to stop nuisance behaviour and antisocial behaviour, including ending tenancies in some cases.

What is antisocial behaviour?

Antisocial behaviour is any behaviour that:

- disturbs the reasonable peace, comfort or privacy of other tenants or neighbours
- is illegal or criminal
- risks the safety of others
- damages public housing property.

We can help you keep your tenancy. However, as the tenant you must stop antisocial behaviour happening at your home. You are responsible for the behaviour of the people who live with you or visit your home.

What action is taken to stop antisocial behaviour?

We will issue a warning and a Notice to remedy breach (RTA Form 11) when a complaint about general nuisance or serious antisocial behaviour is substantiated. Tenants have 14 days to remedy (stop) the behaviours outlined in the notice. A warning letter can also be issued without a notice.

In some instances, we may require a tenant to enter into an Acceptable Behaviour Agreement (ABA) agreeing to stop antisocial behaviours.

If a tenant receives three warnings within a 12-month period, refuses to sign or fails to comply with their ABA, we will take action to end their tenancy. Tenants exited due to serious antisocial behaviour can't reapply for social housing for 12 months.

If dangerous or illegal behaviour occurs at the public housing property, such as manufacturing or selling drugs or a serious assault, we will take action to end the tenancy, and the tenants can't reapply for social housing for 2 years.

I've received a warning letter, what do I do now?

You must stop the behaviours or your tenancy may be at risk.

It's important not to repeat the behaviours detailed in the warning letter or Notice to remedy breach.

If you don't understand the Notice or the warning letter or think the decision to issue this to you is unfair or wrong, please contact your Housing Service Centre.

For more information or if you need support.

If you have any concerns about how behaviours at your property are impacting your tenancy, contact your Housing Service Centre who can refer you to support services.
