The 2020-21 Truth, Healing and Reconciliation grants program aims to acknowledge and raise awareness of institutional child abuse, support those with lived experiences to speak out, and research the impact of this form of abuse.

Minister for Children, Youth Justice and Multicultural Affairs Leanne Linard and local MP Cynthia Lui sent PPAC their congratulations.

“This grants program is helping to reveal the truth of what happened to Queenslanders who experienced institutional child abuse, encourage healing and work towards reconciliation,” Ms Linard said.

“We know how important it is to raise awareness of the impacts of child abuse, to drive real change and to provide the right support, justice and healing for people living with these experiences throughout Queensland.”

Ms Lui said the new PPAC project will help to make sure the vulnerable Aboriginal children of the past are supported to speak their truth about the abuse they experienced and heal in a way that is both culturally and physically safe.

“One of the messages that came out of the Royal Commission into Institutional Responses to Child Sexual Abuse was that we must actively listen to those with lived experiences and acknowledge their stories,” she said.
